

Disney Shareholder Meeting Question
National Center for Public Policy Research, March 9, 2021

I'm Scott Shepard of the National Center for Public Policy Research. Disney seems increasingly confused about civil liberties. It filmed "Mulan" in Xinjiang, China, near the concentration camps where Uyghur Muslims are being systemically abused, and thanked the provincial government for the privilege. Here at home, Disney subsidiary Lucasfilm fired Gina Carano for comparing Biden's America to Nazi atrocities, while her costar Pedro Pascal remained employed after making the same comparison about Trump's America. When is it wrong to discriminate against disfavored groups, or is Disney really going all in for discrimination, as it seems?
